You are needed to fill sand bags

Volunteers are needed (both civilian and military) to fill sand bags at three local area fire stations. The City of Monterey is seeking volunteers to assist with sand bag filling in preparation for the next storm system. Volunteers are especially needed for day shifts, Monday-Friday. Hours are flexible. Volunteers may also work evening shifts. Need volunteers Wednesday beginning at 10 a.m. If needed, this effort will continue through the week-end to February 16. Help is especially needed at Fire Station #3.

Interested volunteers should call 646-3765 (ask for Susan) for information on how to help out and get involved. (Military personnel, during duty days, can call Al Macks (242-5104) at the DLI/POM Public Affairs Office.)

Locations for volunteering are:

Fire Station #1 - Madison and Pacific Streets in Monterey. (You can check in at personnel if you want or go directly to the fire station and sign in from the registration kit at the station.)

Fire Station #2 - 582 Hawthorne in Monterey. The cross street is Hoofman Avenue, one block up the hill from Lighthouse Avenue. (Register at the station via the registration kit outside).

Fire Station #3 - DelaVina Avenue and Montecito Street, Monterey. (You can sign in at the station via the registration kit outside.) Directions: from Monterey, get on Highway 1 North. Take the Casa Verde exit. Turn right off exit. Go up to DelaVina (about 2 blocks). The fire station is on the right side of the road on the corner of DelaVina.

Thank you

I would like to thank all the wonderful people who participated in the voluntary Leave Transfer Program for my benefit. Your kindness is most appreciated. My thanks also to all those who expressed their concerns for my health and well-being. I consider myself extremely fortunate to count all of you as my friends and associates. Once again my heartfelt gratitude to each and every one of you.

Soldiers get more money for DITY moves

Condensed article by Gerry J. Gilmore

WASHINGTON (Army News Service, Dec. 9, 1997) - The Army would like more soldiers to move themselves during stateside to stateside permanent change of station moves and it is willing to pay them more to do so.

In January the Army started a pilot program that increases by 15 percent the do-it-yourself (DITY) moving allowance now available to soldiers. Changes made in the Joint Federal Travel Regulations authorize the Army to increase the DITY allowance from the current 80 percent of what it would cost the government to move household goods by contractor to 95 percent, according to Jeanette McCants, an Army spokesperson. McCants works for Brig. Gen. Boyd E. King, the Army's Director for Transportation, Energy and Troop Support.

Short of its one year test period, a recent change, made as a result of the Programmed Budget Decision 711 signed by the Deputy Secretary of Defense, canceled the test making the change permanent for all services.

During the testing phase in January, the following comments were made by U.S Army officials:

The word has already gotten out, said Lead Transportation Assistant Renee Mallett, who works at the Pentagon Movements Division. "We've already had people call us about the 95 percent DITY move," she said.

The DITY move increase is a win-win situation for the individual soldier and the Army, said Brig. Gen. Boyd E. King, the Army's Director for Transportation, Energy and Troop Support within the Office of the Deputy Chief of Staff for Logistics. "[The DITY move] is one of the options we offer our soldiers to move their household goods from one duty station to another," King said. "Soldiers go out and make the arrangements to rent a truck, load their furniture and move to a new duty station themselves without the Army going out and contracting with movers or packers.

"The advantage for soldiers is they [move] according to their schedules and pack items the way they want to. For the Army, liability is reduced; soldiers accept the responsibility for any damages [that may occur during DITY moves]."

DITY moves can also save government dollars by avoiding storage costs and additional charges required by many moving companies, King said.

Last year, soldiers made about 13,000 DITY moves in conjunction with permanent change of station orders, compared to around 200,000 government-contracted moves completed during the same period, King said, who added that DITY moves aren't for everyone. "If you have 10 crates or 18,000 pounds of household goods, then a DITY move probably isn't the way to go," he said. "But, for soldiers who are just starting out with their families, it makes an attractive package." Soldiers who choose to make DITY moves enjoy more control in the moving process," King said. "On the back end, the Army will save money on storage costs and [damage] claims.

BLACK HISTORY MONTH

Celebrating African-American Culture and Contributions

Commemorating Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

A Testimonial

(condensed from speech given during DLI's King Installation Day, Jan. 22)

by Private First Class Leola L. Oliver, U.S. Army, DLIFLC, Presidio of Monterey

“When Reverend Martin Luther King, Jr. was assassinated in Memphis, Tennessee on April 4, 1968. I was 6 years of age.”

Even as a very young child, I realized that Dr. King must have been a very extraordinary individual. On that fatal day, I recall sitting by my mother's side on the sofa, watching television while my mother drank coffee, and I sipped a cup of tea, pretending to be an adult. The television show we had been watching was abruptly interrupted by a breaking news story. The journalist (probably a young Walter Cronkite) announced, sadly, that Dr. King had been fatally shot on the balcony of Memphis, Tennessee motel. My mother screamed in disbelief, and I have a very vivid memory of how she wept for what seemed to be hours. That momentous day became one of the darkest days of my childhood. My emulation of adulthood seemed figurative of the way in which the children were forced to cope with the difficulty in comprehending why America had lost such an inspirational leader.

I was unable to fathom why all of the adults I encountered were so deeply depressed. Not long after his death, I developed a clear understanding. I attended grade school in Compton, California and also lived through the riots of the neighboring city, known as the Watts Riots. The school district officials set a precedent by ensuring that the children at all levels were educated about the civil rights struggle through the viewing of documentaries and being exposed to writings which chronicled the movement, spearheaded by Dr. King. I am very grateful that I was afforded that opportunity because the civil rights movement led by Dr. King, serves as a reminder to me in my everyday life that it is very important not to look for racism, and discrimination, but rather, to peacefully stand against injustices waged against anyone, whether that person be an African American, or of any other ethnicity.

I learned that Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. was a true leader. He was able to mobilize people from all walks of life to support a common cause in a peaceful manner. Everyday, the strength of his resolve was tested to new heights, but somehow, he always found the valiance to persist. Tonight's showing of both those who have come out in support of this event, as well as those who have participated, is a true reflection of the dream that Dr. Martin Luther King envisioned people of all races in working together in harmony.

Although racism will always be an indispensable characteristic of our society, we can be thankful to Dr. King and the thousands who risked their lives to guide America towards realizing a major part of Dr. King's dream. The elimination of legal discrimination opened the doors to achieving the foundation of equal opportunity for all. In Dr. King's most famous "I Have a Dream" speech, he spoke of children of all races being able to hold hands. Today, society is a reflection of that ideal. In sports, we play together; in the movies, we laugh together, and cry together; and in music, we sing and dance together. While there are still mountains left to climb, if we are willing to climb them together, we shall reach that mountain top, and someday, be able to proclaim, as did Dr. King at the end of his "I Have a Dream" speech..."Free at Last, Free at Last...Thank God Almighty, we're Free At Last!"

Enough

The Method of Peace for the American Community

(condensed from speech given Jan. 22
during DLI's King Installation Day)

By Specialist David Enders,
U.S. Army

This world's idealists have always had the rougher road. Although history has birthed many, there have only been two kinds of idealists: those desolated by society's inconsonance, and those consecrated to society's improvement, around whom the desolate rally.

Martin Luther King Jr. was the latter, responsible for others. He fought violence with peace, prejudice with reason, and racism with brotherhood; he preached family, community, and love. Martin Luther King strove for the ideal. His innocent blood shed to leave a world not without heaven's values.

Most have at some time experienced the barbed edge sword of prejudice. So have I. In a community without minority groups, a minority was created. It was simply the minority including those who could not easily defend themselves, the minority including those on whose backs others found recognition; it was only three or four families within a community of less than 20,000.

It was my family.

When my sister, a straight "A" student, was singled out by a teacher and told she was worthless in front of the entire class, when a first grade teacher found almost daily punishment appropriate for a boy whose crime was not smiling enough, when the assistant principle said my problems were because my mother was unfit, it was enough. There was a real minority of people who seemed to need to place themselves above others in order to feel worthwhile, who suffered from the "but I'm still better than them syndrome." They were those who oppressed. Fifteen years later, when I faced the guilty and saw apology in their eyes, it was enough. And when I saw contempt in their eyes, I pitied them. This was what Christ taught. This was what Dr. Martin Luther King taught.

It was a difficult concept for most to grasp: "Do not fight your persecutors but be sure that they see your suffering and they will eventually be forced to see their own injustice. They will change, but they will change themselves." Taking this philosophy a step farther, he also made sure that others

They led
We followed
Some hated
They counseled
We listened
Some argued
They sacrificed
We received
Some forgot
They died
We live
They talk
Of what do they talk

saw the suffering. The best way to beat the bully was to allow him look small to his peers. If you fought back, the bully won. But following through on this philosophy required the patience of a saint, and the dedication of a martyr. You had to be willing to die rather than harm someone else. He was. He not only lead his disciples, but also taught them according to his ideal of nonviolent resistance. He convinced literally hundreds of thousands of followers to turn the other cheek. How difficult must it have been to convince an oppressed community not to strike back? How easy did he make it appear? He led by example, building his method of nonviolence on faith, preaching that we should love our neighbors and enemies because God loves them; it had nothing to do with them being worthy of our love. He taught the difference between different kinds of love, the difference between like and love, and the fact that we were never commanded to like our enemies. As a nation we achieved peace through maintaining a greater capacity for violence than our enemy, and it worked. But he truly faced evil with good and won. He identified the manner in which he could be superior to the enemy and then, forced the enemy to fight on those terms.

By acting out of love and declaring that if he and his followers were wrong, in the end they would be the only ones to suffer, he achieved moral superiority to his adversaries; he weakened their resolve and finally won.

This was the example I wanted to follow. This is the example I want my children to follow. Today's American nation embraces its minorities. And that's good. History books are being re-written to include everyone. English curricula around the country is diversifying. And science books are giving credit where it's due. But it's not enough.

Dr. Martin Luther King's "beloved community" is a dream. One in which everyone is equally judged according to who they are, not what they are or where they come from. Yesterday remains asleep, dreaming of that day in which we will no longer be the American Jewish community, the American Christian community, the American Muslim community, the African-American community, the Chinese-American community, the Native-American community, or the European-American community, but simply the American community.

Internet Job Referral System and opportunities for vocational teachers

Troops to Teachers (TTT) has introduced a system which allows school district administrators to access information regarding TTT participants as potential hires and to post job vacancies directly to the Internet. School districts contacting TTT are searching more and more for service members with vocational and technical skills such as electronics, computer science and aviation operations among others.

Many states do not require individuals with vocational/technical backgrounds to have a baccalaureate degree to qualify for vocational certification. Medical Tip:

Sinus Infection & Strep Throat

Acute and Chronic Sinusitis: What Is Sinusitis?

Sinusitis, the inflammation of the mucous membranes in the sinuses, is a very common disorder. In general, it is caused by infection, allergies, and irritation from toxic substances in the air. There are two types, and you should know the difference so that you can seek appropriate medical treatment.

What Are the Two Types?

The first is acute sinusitis. The second type, chronic, or recurring, sinusitis is more complex and more common.

Do the Treatments Differ?

Acute sinusitis usually responds well to antibiotics, decongestants, and antihistamines. If there is pus within a sinus cavity, it must be drained. For chronic sinusitis, medication may be temporarily effective. If symptoms recur or persist, then a more detailed assessment is required to determine whether surgery is needed.

Which Type Do You Have?

To find out whether you have acute or chronic sinusitis, simply check the symptoms below that apply:

- + Pain in only one area
- + The sudden start of pain
- + Discolored drainage on one side of the nose
- + Congestion (stiffness) on one side of the nose
- + Congestion on both sides of the nose
- + Frequent and sometimes severe headaches
- + Pressure in the head that may be intense

If you have the first four symptoms only, you probably have acute sinusitis. If your symptoms are those in the second half of the list, you probably have chronic sinusitis.

How Can You Be Sure?

If you think you have acute sinusitis, you should see your family doctor. He or she will probably diagnose your condition according to the "rule of one":

- * One area of pain
- * Drainage on one side of the nose

* Stiffness on one side of the nose If you think you have chronic sinusitis, you should see a specialist, who will probably diagnose the problem with the help of a CT scan of the sinus cavity.

How Does Chronic Sinusitis Develop?

Chronic sinusitis usually develops when inflamed mucosal lining and anatomical obstruction make it impossible for the sinuses to drain properly.

The body constantly produces mucus as a lubricant.

In the sinus cavities, this lubricant is moved across tissue linings toward the opening of each sinus by millions of hairlike cilia. If one of these openings is already narrow, inflammation can cause it to swell completely shut and block the movement of mucus. Surgery may be needed to correct the problem.

What Will Surgery Do?

Surgery to correct chronic sinusitis performs two functions. First, it enlarges the natural opening.

Since the cilia move mucus in only one direction toward the natural opening in each sinus, creating a second opening that is not at the natural site would not help because the cilia would simply ignore it.

Second, it leaves many cilia in place. Procedures that reduce the number of active cilia, whether by creating holes or scar tissue, block the movement of mucus and are less effective.

Endoscopic sinus surgery is the most effective procedure because it restores the flow of mucus by removing areas of obstruction. This permanently restores the normal flow of mucus and air through the natural sinus openings.

What Can You Expect From Surgery?

A simple procedure is usually performed under local or general anesthesia, with patients returning to normal activities within a day or two, and complete recovery taking about four weeks. Procedures for more complex cases, however, can last four or five hours under general anesthesia, with the recovery process taking longer. The physician will follow up as needed according to the type and complexity of surgery.

Strep Throat Fact Sheet

Strep throat is caused by a bacterium called:

Group A Streptococcus

+ Strep throat can occur at any age, but is most frequent among school-aged children.

Symptoms start 1 to 3 days after exposure and may include:

- + Fever
- + Sore throat
- + Tender and swollen neck glands

Some people can catch the strep bacterium but never feel sick at all.

Strep throat is usually spread person to person by direct contact

+ The strep bacterium is found in the nose and/or throat of infected persons and is spread to the next person through the air with sneezing or coughing. Rarely, people catch strep throat by eating contaminated food or milk.

+ People with strep throat can spread the disease to others until 24 hours after treatment or for 10 to 21 days if untreated.

Strep throat is diagnosed by a throat culture

+ Throat cultures usually take 24-48 hours. There are now rapid tests which can be used to diagnose strep throat more quickly.

Treatment is important

+ Persons with strep throat can be treated with antibiotics. Treatment is important to prevent serious complications such as rheumatic fever and kidney disease.

Strep throat can be prevented:

- + Cover the mouth when coughing or sneezing
- + Wash hands after wiping or blowing nose, coughing and sneezing
- + Wash hands before preparing food
- + See your doctor if you or your child have symptoms of strep throat

Infected children should be excluded from child care/school and infected foodhandlers should be excluded from work until 24 hours after starting treatment.

Provided by the Red Cross:

Are you ready for a flood or a flash flood?

Here's what you can do to prepare for such emergencies

Know what to expect

- Know your area's flood risk - if unsure call your local Red Cross chapter.
- If it has been raining hard for several hours, or steadily raining for several days, be alert to the possibility of a flood.
- Listen to local radio or TV stations for flood information.
- Floods can take several hours to days to develop
 - A flood watch means flooding is possible in your area.
 - A flood warning means flooding is already occurring or will occur soon in your area.
- Flash floods can take only a few minutes to a few hours to develop
 - A flash flood watch means flash flooding is possible in your area.
 - A flash flood warning means flash flooding is occurring or will occur very soon in your area.

Prepare a Family Disaster Plan

- Check your homeowner's or renter's insurance to see if it covers flooding. If not, find out how to get flood insurance.
- Keep insurance policies, documents, and other valuables in a safe-deposit box.
- Assemble a Disaster Supplies Kit containing-
 - First Aid kit
 - Canned food and a can opener
 - Bottled water
 - Rubber boots and rubber gloves
 - Battery-powered radio, flashlight, and extra batteries
- Identify where you could go if told to evacuate. Choose several places... a friend's home in another town, a motel, or a shelter.

When a Flood Watch is issued...

- Move your furniture and valuables to higher floors of your home.
- Fill your car's gas tank, in case an evacuation notice is issued.

When a Flood Warning is issued...

- Listen to local radio and TV stations for information and advice. If told to evacuate, do so as soon as possible.

When a Flash Flood Watch is issued...

- Be alert to signs of flash flooding and be ready to evacuate on a moment's notice.

When a Flash Flood Warning is issued...

- Or if you think it has already started, evacuate immediately. you may have only seconds to escape. Act quickly!
- Move to higher ground away from rivers, streams, creeks, and storm drains. Do not drive around barricades... they are there for your safety.
- If your car stalls in rapidly rising waters, abandon it immediately and climb to higher ground.

FEDERAL INCOME TAX TIPS (To be continued)

9. TAX TIP: If my move to a new assignment began in 1997 and ended in 1998, when do I file my moving expenses?

You have two choices - file them all on your 1997 tax return, or file your 1997 expenses on your 1997 return and your 1998 expenses on your 1998 return. The Omnibus Reconciliation Act of 1993 changed the nature of moving expenses for moves after 1 January 1994. Moving expenses are now an adjustment to gross income and no longer include certain indirect moving expenses. See the Moving Expense Deduction flyer for more information.

10. TAX TIP: What form do I use to file for my moving expenses? Form 3903 if your move was to or within the U.S., and Form 3903F if your move was outside the U.S. or its possessions.

11. TAX TIP: How long do I have to reinvest my gain from the sale of my old personal residence into a new personal residence? For sales prior to 1998, civilians have two years (four years if overseas), and military members have four years (stateside or overseas). This replacement period is suspended while military members are stationed outside the United States. NOTE, however, that the replacement period, plus any period of suspension, cannot last more than eight years after the sale of the home.

12. TAX TIP: How much of a charitable contribution can I deduct without itemizing? None, you can only take charitable contribution deductions by itemizing on the Schedule A, Form 1040.

13. TAX TIP: How can I claim the out-of-pocket expenses I incur in traveling from place to place during my work day? You use the Form 2106, Employee Business Expenses, and Schedule A, Itemized Deductions, and list your actual travel expenses or apply a flat 31 cents per mile if you use your POV.

14. TAX TIP: How do I report the Employee Business Expense deduction for 1997 tax returns? You must itemize (i.e., use the Form 2106 and the Schedule A) to claim these expenses.

15. TAX TIP: Where do I mail my tax return if I am an overseas taxpayer? You should send your return to Internal Revenue Service Center, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania 19255.
